It is difficult for injured victims and their families to make sure they are choosing the right attorney to represent them in their claims against the trucking company and its insurer. Many attorneys advertise that they handle truck accident cases but often they do not have the background and experience to handle these complex matters. The injured victims end up settling their case for a fraction of the actual value of their injuries and never find out that their attorney really was not qualified to represent them. We have put together a checklist of questions to verify that an attorney has the expertise to handle truck accident cases. Every truck accident case needs a truck accident lawyer!
